

17 Sep 2018 | Analysis

QUOTED. Sept. 17, 2018. Kevin Coy.

by

Many legal threats faced by device and diagnostics companies come from federal law and regulations, but a growing class of strict state privacy laws protecting consumer data could open the door to new risks. See what attorney Kevin Coy said about it here.

"Unless by chance Congress puts in place comprehensive federal legislation, states will continue to be free to legislate on their own. I think that will result in a continued increase in privacy and data security requirements, and also potential liability for failure to meet those requirements."

–Kevin Coy, partner, Arnall Golden Gregory

- Find out more: State Laws Put New Focus On Data Privacy

Click here for a free trial of Medtech Insight