

18 Jul 2019 | News

QUOTED. 18 July 2019. Suzanne Schwartz.

by

The US FDA's Suzanne Schwartz says a new law might be the antidote to companies that willingly hide cybersecurity vulnerabilities to avoid concerning their customers. Check out her comments here.

"We certainly want to see much broader adoption of coordinated vulnerability disclosure across the entire ecosystem. We may be looking to require coordinated vulnerability disclosure through legislation in order to level the playing field." – Suzanne Schwartz, deputy director, the Center for Devices and Radiological Health's Office of Strategic Partnerships and Technology Innovation, US FDA

- Find out more: Siemens Cybersecurity Expert Says Medtech Industry Has 'Perverse Incentive' To Not Disclose Vulnerabilities – Might A New Law Be The Fix?

Click here for a free trial of Medtech Insight