European lab testing company Unilabs Holdings SA has acquired Spanish radiology services firm CMDI (Centros Médicos de Diagnóstico Integral) for an undisclosed price. The acquisition marks Unilabs' first foray into the Spanish radiology market. See what Unilabs Spain CEO Alejandro Cuartero said about it here.

"It's a great geographic fit, expanding our network in the important Spanish market. And this deal means we are entering the radiology segment, a new area for us in Spain. That means we can offer patients and carers a broader offering in more places. As diagnostics experts, radiology is a basic pillar for Unilabs, being an interesting area of growth – either serving our patients on site through the wider network, or providing top quality teleradiology services to our customers." – Alejandro Cuartero, CEO, Unilabs Spain
